Dear Pfenning's Food Box Community,

We are in our last delivery week for this year!

Harvest is done, local production has been reaped, migrant workers heading home, more work indoors than outdoors now, and the same could be said for all of us, as well. When winter rolls around, we all tend to focus more on the inner values – whether it be the cozy evenings at home around a crackling fireplace in the midst of our loved ones, or your increased inner reflection on matters important to you. No lack of those in these turbulent times.

Here's an end-of-the-year tidbit you may be interested in. After the unprecedented increase in the need for home delivery and for shopping at our Store since March, which remains considerable, I was no longer able to work on the Pfenning's Farm. Home delivery and Store matters have been demanding my full-time engagement. As this has not changed and appears to be the "new normal," I have now – after 22 years of faithful part-time service – decided to resign from working on the Pfenning's Farm and to continue concentrating fully on our Home Delivery Service and on Pfenning's Organic & More – the Store. Yes, for anyone not yet in the loop, we are Pfenning's Organic & More – whereas Pfenning's Organic Vegetables Inc. may have the same name (and be related as to name and family relations), but is an absolutely separate business.

Back to field happenings! Almut and Kris, who has been helping us out with Food Box packing since the summer, were fortunate enough to muster some elbow grease and assist Dianne from Golden Acres Farm (from where we get a lot of the local produce you see in your Baskets) with her Carrot harvest just a few weeks ago at the beginning of December. Dianne does a lot of hands-on farming and was happy to get some handy help where machines could not go due to the wet conditions at that time. This may have been one of the latest Carrot harvests ever. We look forward to seeing Dianne's Local Carrots in many Food Baskets this winter.
